The bed liner can also help prevent the cargo from sliding, due to the texture of the liner's surface. If your bed liner becomes damaged, or you simply want to remove it, just follow these simple steps and it will be out in less than an hour. Climb into the bed and use your socket wrench and Torx socket to remove the cargo tie-down brackets from the interior bed walls. There should be two or four, depending on the truck. Pull the tie-down brackets off and set them aside. Climb out of the bed and move to the front of the bed. From there, lift the front panel of the bed liner off the front wall of the bed and push the front panel backward so it does not slip back over the top of the bed wall. Move to the back of the truck and, with the tailgate down, pull the sides of the bed liner toward the center of the bed. Pull the bed liner toward you. With a little coercion, you will be able to take it completely out and set it aside. Take the socket wrench and Torx sockets and undo the fasteners holding the tailgate cover to the inside face of the tailgate. Once the cover is off, set it aside and reinstall the Torx fasteners. Reinstall the cargo tie-down brackets in reverse of how you removed them in Step 1. Load area and dimensions details for the 1999-2006 Ford Ranger pickup. The more room you get in the front, the less you get in the back. Load length for the single cab is 2,280mm but this shrinks down to 1,753 for the super cab and 1,530mm for the double cab. The tailgate can be pulled down to 90 degrees or will fold right down if necessary. Many used examples will have been fitted with Truckman tops to protect cargo. While they are worthy additions it means that cargo can't be piled up above the side panels Payloads range from 1,085kg to 1,195kg. The seat covers and cushioning can break down over time until they reach a point where you have to replace them. While you can simply put cheap seat covers on them, if you want to enjoy the initial quality once again it's best to replace the entire seat assembly. Anyone with a modicum of automotive-repair experience can take out Ford Ranger seats in less than one hour. Slide the driver's seat bottom as far forward as it will go. Remove the bolts from the driver's seat rear legs using your socket set. Slide the seat bottom as far backward as it will go. Remove the bolts from the driver's seat front legs using your socket set. Fold the driver's seat's seat-back as far forward as it will go. Lift the seat up by hand and take it out of the Ranger. Repeat steps one through five on the passenger seat.
